You will also discover other large landscape paintings by American artists George Inness, William Keith, Thomas Moran, and Julian Rix, all of which which enhance the Museum's collection of 19th century American art.

In addition, the Museum houses the largest collection of works by "Golden Age" illustrator J.C. Leyendecker, best known for his Arrow Collar Man magazine advertisements of 1905-1930.

The Museum also features paintings by late 19th and early 20th-century European artists including animal painter Rosa Bonheur, the neoclassical artist William Bouguereau, the popular French impressionist Pierre-Auguste Renoir, and many more.
